PEDRERA TABLE

Pedrera Table - Barba Corsini & Joaquim Ruiz Millet, 1955

Many architects and furniture designers of the Bauhaus era were intent on providing well-designed homes and impeccably manufactured furnishings for the "common man." In 1955, Barba Corsini, a leading functionalist architect, realized his contemporary vision through his renovation of the loft space and the furnishings he custom designed for "La Pedrera."

Corsini was a great admirer of Finnish architecture, which he believed to be the finest in Europe on account of the powerful simplicity of the designs. "Powerful simplicity" is indeed an apt description of Corsini's personal design style, as represented by the Pedrera series.
